

Your first case

You can start with a question

Read the situation, compare the records and try a decision. Make a response someone could use. Keep the evidence close. You can revise.

A useful explanation

"My claim is __. Record __ shows __. That matters because __. I still need to know __."

A useful challenge

"Which part of the source led you there?"

"What is the strongest reason for the other option?"

"Whose perspective are we missing?"

A useful revision

"I changed __ because __. The part I am keeping is __, supported by __."

Your work can stay private

Use the printed packet or local workbench. You do not need an outside account. Plan in English, Spanish or Spanglish, then make the meaning clear for the audience. Keep private records and other people's details out.
